School Closes

The following has been handed in for publication by Mr. H. J. Boettcher:

The St. Matthew School has temporarily closed its doors. The decision of the J. P. has been upheld. A school for the Christian training of children has been legally shut up. Children of Alberta, between the ages of 7 to 15 be long, not to the parents, but to the State. The full meaning of the School Attendance Act has been established, and while this law remains in force, we are going to abide by the law. Anyone in the Stony Plain community wishing to know how the result was arrived at, let him or her kindly peruse the following excerpt from the Honorable Justice Beck's statement—

Excerpt from the statement of Justice Beck's:

In 1913 the School Attendance law was changed so that it read: Every child between the ages of 7-15 must attend Public School unless in the opinion of the Inspector the child is under efficient instruction at home or elsewhere. "Up to the time of this amendment the question what was efficient instruction at home or elsewhere was for the decision of the justice of the peace, or a police magistrate, with the right of appeal by the accused parent to a district court judge. By the amendment the decision is for some one of the school inspectors—officers appointed and subject to dismissal by the Executive, and wholly under their control, that is, under the control of the Department of Education, with-

Eberhardt holding service in the Town hall; Prince Tuttle, in the Methodist Church in the afternoon; and Rev. F. E. Wilson holding Watch Night services at the latter church, which ushered in the New Year. A Watch Night service is an innovation in Stony, but a goodly number turned out in spite of the stormy weather.

Accident while Sleighing.

While on sleigh riding with a friend on Thursday night last, young Mr. Reinhold Schmitt, who was spending his vacation with the Treit family, in Stony, had the misfortune to get tipped out of the vehicle and have his leg broken in two places. He was brought back to town, where he received medical attention, and was afterward taken to the Edmonton General Hospital on Saturday afternoon's train. The young man had been attending Concordia College, and was spending his holidays in Stony. His parents live at Vernon, B.C., where they have a fruit farm.

His brother Henry, who was injured last summer while bathing at Seba Beach, is in the same hospital, recovering from his injuries.

"I Had Bilious Attacks and Stomach Weakness"

Mrs. Wm. Robinson, Yorker, Sask., writes: "I suffered from stomach and liver trouble, and used to have bilious attacks so bad that I could do nothing for weeks at a time. My stomach would be so weak that not even a drink of water would stay on it. On my sister's advice, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and must say that they have made me feel like a new woman."

Stop The Suffering And Loss

Statisticians appearing in official Government reports do not, as a rule, make very interesting reading. They are, however, frequently most instructive, trouble to study them, and the lessons contained are, therefore, largely lost to the public. The compilation of these statistics and their publication cost a lot of money. Even if people generally do not read and study the facts and figures presented, the money is not lost nor wasted because such information forms the basis upon which Governments and other public bodies formulate policies and act.

A few days ago the annual report of the director of vital statistics for the Province of Saskatchewan for the year 1921 was made public, and, inasmuch as conditions in the three Prairie Provinces are not materially different, the information therein set forth, and the conclusions to be drawn therefrom, may be considered as applicable in large measure to all these Provinces.

According to this report, 6,170 deaths occurred during the year, or 463 less than in the preceding year; a remarkable fact, but there are other facts noted in connection with this mortality record which are not gratifying, nor to the credit of the people of an enlightened country. For instance, over one-third of all deaths were of infants under one year of age. Yet it is safe to say that, if proper pre-natal care had been taken, and reasonable care taken following birth, the vast majority of these little ones could have been saved. This report discloses the fact that 211 persons died of tuberculosis. This figure, however, was less than one-half that of 1920 when 491 deaths from tuberculosis were reported. Here, then, is another most gratifying fact. It proves that the persistent campaign being waged against the White Plague is having the desired effect, and it would seem to establish the truth of the statement that it is possible to stamp out his dread disease, just as yellow fever and smallpox have practically been removed from the list of diseases which scourge the human race.

Another feature of the report is not so encouraging. It records an increase of fifty per cent. in the number of deaths from cancer. The fact is also noted that the death rate from cancer is steadily rising, the rate being only 15 in every 100,000 population in 1914 but 39.3 in 1921, or more than double.

Deaths from communicable diseases in 1921 totalled 928, or 299 less than in 1920, which is certainly good news. But before Saskatchewan boasts of this record, it should give earnest consideration to the further statement in the report that the number of deaths from scarlet fever and diphtheria was the highest since the preceding year, and that the estimated loss to the Province from deaths through communicable diseases totalled no less a sum than one and three-quarter millions of dollars. Yet we find people, including legislators and municipal councillors, criticizing and opposing grants for public health work and prevention services, municipal hospitals and municipal nursing services.

People complain bitterly of the losses sustained by the West through high freight rates, customs tariffs, and inadequate grain marketing methods, yet they view with apparent indifference and little concern an annual loss of millions of dollars, and thousands of precious lives, which loss could largely be overcome through the exercise of proper preventive measures and care.

Some attention has been given in this column during recent weeks to the important subject of immigration and Canada's need for a larger population. That series of articles was introduced by an argument for the creation of conditions which would enable people already in the country to make a success of their farming activities, and thereby retain population we now have, because it surely is realized that our own people are preferable to incoming and untutored immigrants. It is even more important that, to the full extent of our power, we should create conditions which will save to Canada the children born in this country—our native born.

Yet Saskatchewan alone lost through death in 1921 no less than 2,413 children under the age of one year, and of this number over 1,200 died within one week of birth. That is to say, one out of every five deaths in Saskatchewan is a baby less than seven days old. Neither an all-wise Providence nor nature intended that such things should be, and we are figures should impress the people of the West with the imperative necessity of re-doing their efforts during this new year to prevent disease, and thereby not only save life but mitigate much of the suffering in the world, the bulk of which is directly caused through disease.

An Important Ruling

Money May Be Recovered If Wrong Person Paid

A ruling of importance to banks has been delivered in the Court of Appeal, Montreal. Under it, whoever pays a debt to a person believing him to be the creditor of the debt, but who is not, may recover against the person receiving payment.

On this principle an appeal by the Bank of Hochelaga to recover a sum of $47,495 paid by them to A. Mathieu et al. in error, when the actual creditor was the trustee of the estate of the late Hon. Wilfrid Provost, was maintained.

Pioneer Manitoba Fruit Grower Dies
A. P. Stevenson, Manitoba's pioneer fruit grower, is dead in California, a report states. Mr. Stevenson was among the first farmers of the west to make a success of fruit growing. On the Stevenson farm a few miles northwest of Morden, every variety of small fruit, from strawberries to peaches, was grown.

Pull down a section of the banana peel, loosen the banana from the rest of the peel; remove all coarse threads and replace fruit in its original position in the peel. Set the bananas in a granite pan into the oven and cook until the peel is blackened and the pulp is soft (about 20 minutes in a moderate oven).

Cook the cleaned raisins in the boiling water adding water as needed. Mix and sift the sugar and cornstarch and add to the raisins. Stir until boiling then let simmer for ten minutes, and add butter and flavoring. Remove bananas from the peel to a hot plate, pour the sauce over them and serve at once.

The Good Old Days

Do Not Compare Very Favorably With Twentieth Century

A Scottish journal says: Those who lament the good old days and compare them favorably with our own should be told that "till the beginning of the seventeenth century chairs for ordinary household use were unknown. Hats were worn at meals. Washing formed no part of the morning toilet even in Charles II's time, and very few in any country in Europe washed their faces every day. The value of forks did not become general until the eighteenth century, and food was picked from the general dish and raised to the mouth with the fingers. As one reads such records one comments heartily, give me the twentieth century and its ways!—Presbyterian Witness.

Interesting Comparisons To Gain A Clearer Idea Of Canada's Enormous Wheat Crop

How large is Canada's wheat crop this year? To the man on the street the fact that Canada has a crop of over 340,000,000 bushels means little more than a mere jumble of figures. But if you were to tell him that if Canada's crop of wheat this year was ground into flour and made into bread, there would be enough to supply every man, woman and child in England with a loaf of bread weighing twenty-four ounces every day for a whole year, or a similar nation of the entire population of the United States for four months, he would gain a clearer idea of the enormous crop of wheat that Canada produced. With a minimum wheat yield of 243,000,000 bushels, statistics show that this quantity is equivalent to 20,580,000,000 pounds of wheat, or 10,290,000 tons, or 73,500,000 barrels of flour; which could be made into 12,862,500,000 loaves of bread, weighing 24 ounces each.

Nearly everybody has read of the march of the German soldiers through Brussels and how it took several hours for the troops to pass a given point. This event was said to be unique in the annals of military history, but can you imagine 7,350 trains running at intervals of five minutes apart, taking 253 days to pass a given point? That is just how long it would take 257,250 (40-ton) grain cars loaded to capacity to move this year's wheat crop. Placed end to end these cars would make a train 1,916 miles long, or one extending from Montreal to a point 26 miles west of Swift Current, Sask., or from New York to Denver, Colorado. "Alleviating thirty-five cars to a locomotive, it would make a total length of cars and locomotives combined to 2,060 miles.

The largest trans-Atlantic freight carrier of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Ltd., is the S.S. Bosworth, with a capacity of 352,000 bushels of wheat. It would take 974 steamships of the Bosworth's capacity to carry the wheat crop of the prairie provinces across the ocean. Taking the Bosworth's gross tonnage at about 6,000, this would mean a fleet of 5,344,000 gross tons, or the largest mercantile fleet in the world with the exception of the United States and the United Kingdom.

Trail Into Northern Outpost

Possible to Travel by Winter Road From The Pas

For the first time in history it is possible for residents of The Pas and district to visit the outside world by means of automobile. Dr. R. D. Orok, physician for The Pas Lumber Company, and J. A. McDonald, logging superintendent, have returned from a journey to Star City, Sask., a distance of 250 miles each way, by motor car. This achievement represents a new milestone in the history of Northern Manitoba.

Credit is chiefly due to the efforts of The Pas Lumber Company, who have recently constructed part of this highway 130 miles into their camps, where it connects with the Saskatchewan Government's municipal road into Star City and Fisdale, a further distance of 120 miles.

This road from The Pas is known as the McDonald Trail, the opening of which has created a good northern cash market for farmers in Northern Saskatchewan to dispose of their commodities.

Premier Bracken and R. H. Hall, M.L.A., of Saskatchewan, will be urged to induce the federal government to appropriate sufficient money to render this road suitable for summer, as well as winter travel.

Adding to Life's Span

Science Unable to Extend the Period Of Normal Life of Man

A controversy is going on in the newspapers of the United States between Dr. Adolph Lorenz, world-famous surgeon, and certain other members of the medical profession. The question under discussion is: Can science prolong life? "Yes," say some doctors; while Dr. Lorenz comes back with an equally emphatic negative. The idea that science can prolong life is based on certain recent discoveries which protect the body against infection, add new vigor to cells that have lain dormant, and cure diseases heretofore regarded as incurable. Answering the claims made in behalf of the discoveries, Dr. Lorenz simply remarks: "Man's laws may be broken; but nature's laws—never." And the days of our years, according to the Bible, are three score years and ten.

The wish to defraud nature by stealing a few more years from the natural life is very ancient. Very likely it was born with the discovery by man that he is mortal. Anyway the prolongation of life was the subject of learned discussions among the Greeks in the days of Aristotle, and earlier. Alchemists sought the elixir of life through the medieval age. Spanish explorers hunted the world for the fountain of youth. They never found it; and it is highly probable that the modern medical discoverers, valuable as their work has been in adding to the science of preventing and curing disease, are quite as far from it as was Ponce de Leon in the everglades of Florida.

The death rate from certain diseases has been cut down, certain diseases have been practically wiped out and improvements in living conditions have been effected in parts of the world that unquestionably have a marked influence on public health. This does not mean that the period of a man's life has been extended. All that it can mean is that a larger proportion of the people has been enabled to more nearly approximate the natural span of life. We read even now of people living to be a hundred and twenty or thirty or forty years of age; who never had the assistance of the discoveries that are now claimed to be able to prolong life beyond the accepted average age. They were endowed by their Creator with unusual powers of survival, or led lives more nearly in accordance with the laws of nature, or both. That there is any other road to long life has not yet been shown. "Science," says Dr. Lorenz, "can help humanity by teaching the 'virtue of a natural life'—and apparently only in that way—Higgins Leader.

Strange Denizen of the Deep

Cross Between Whale and Turtle Cast Up By Recent Earthquakes

In Chile The tidal waves which recently devastated parts of the coast of Chile cast upon the beach at the same time a strange denizen of the deep whose like has not been seen in these waters in many years. It would appear to be a cross between a whale and a turtle.

Fishermen at Lurin, 25 miles from Lima, reported a huge cetacean denning in shallow waters of the bay. Then they sent out word it was an unknown monster of the sea, and that they had killed it.

The director of the Natural History Museum of the University of San Marcos and the official taxidermist made a trip to Lurin for the purpose of studying and classifying the strange visitor. They found an animal with the body of a whale, but with a head and extremities resembling those of a turtle. After examination they came to the conclusion that it belonged to the family of "Balainidae" cetaceans, inhabiting the South Pacific waters. It is supposed that it was carried along by the Humboldt current and thrown up on the beach by the tremendous surge following the tidal waves of the Chilean earthquake.

The specimen will be brought back to Lima for mounting and will be preserved in the University Museum.

Winnipeg Great Wheat Market

Inspections for Three Month Period Showed 106,231,513 Bushels

Speaking of the record crop movement in the Canadian west during the past season and the part the railways played in the marketing of it, D. C. Coleman, Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, addressing a Kiwanis Club luncheon in Winnipeg, declared that city was now the greatest wheat market in the world in the point of receipts. He quoted figures showing that inspections for the three months ending November 20 at Chicago, totalled 8,375,000 bushels, Minneapolis 45,969,100 bushels, while inspections at Winnipeg for the same period amounted to 106,231,513 bushels.

Speaking as a transportation man, Mr. Coleman said the facilities furnished by the grain trade, including the co-operative organizations, for the distribution of the western grain crop were on the whole the most economical and the most efficient in existence in any producing country. If there were abuses, he said, we should calmly and rationally consider the best method of correction and only discard existing machinery as a last resort.

Referring to the shipment of grain over the Canadian Pacific Railway from September 1, Mr. Coleman said an average of 1,016 cars were loaded each day in Winnipeg for transportation east, which meant that a loaded train left there for the lake every forty-five minutes during a ninety-one day period.

Chicago's New Post Office Terminal

The post office department in a statement at Washington said that in a few weeks it would have in operation in Chicago the world's largest mail terminal.

Occupation of the terminal which is two blocks long and six stories high, has begun and will be completed some time in January.

The terminal adjoins the Union Station and track arrangements will permit the sending of mail sent down chutes into railway cars.

Splendid Organization And Efficient Service Rendered By Canada's Postal Department

Many of our great industries would experience difficulty in existing if there was no suitable medium through which communication could be conducted with distant points with despatch and safety, and the part that the post office plays in the home and business life of the Canadian public is seldom thought of, but its value cannot be computed in monetary terms. From the International Boundary to the Arctic Circle the Canadian Post Office Department handles the correspondence of the public, and this never-failing machine functions with an efficiency which seems remarkable to the uninitiated. The letter or parcel posted in the little grocery-post office in some out-of-the-way country hamlet receives the same care and attention as that posted in the neat, attractive red letter boxes in the larger centres of community life. Never for an instant does this "machine" relax its vigilance in safeguarding the property of the public, and its responsibility does not cease until the letter or parcel is delivered to its destination.

Thirty-six thousand miles of railway are used by the Post Office Department in distributing mail in Canada. There are over 12,000 mail routes, many of which are a considerable distance from the railway track, and which can only be reached by a motor or horse-driven vehicle dog-sled, or canoe. The department operates 12,000 post offices, or one to approximately every 700 of Canada's population, as well as 5,300 money order offices. Many of these offices are located in palatial buildings, the property of the Federal Government. To receive the mail from the public the department has distributed at convenient points over 8,500 street letter boxes and receptacles, as well as 200,000 rural delivery boxes. In the cities and towns the letter boxes are cleared several times a day, while the country mail is collected regularly each day.

Over half a billion letters and postcards were carried by the department in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1922, according to Government statistics. In addition, the department handled 350,000,000 newspapers, 50,000 parcels, and 250,000,000 circulars, making in all well over a billion miles during the past fiscal year. At all points of the day, mail is moving from one point to another. Inclement weather does not retard the delivery of the mails. Even though other public utilities fail to perform their duties, the mail service must go on, and it is that idea of unflinching loyalty to the service that has resulted in Canada having one of the finest of postal systems.

The Post Office Department can, with justification, claim to have the largest money order business of any organization in Canada. During the period under review the department issued postal notes and money orders to the value of $25,000,000, of which sum orders represent $270,000,000 and postal notes the balance. Money orders issued and handled by the department totalled 10,000,000; postal notes 6,000,000; Canadian orders issued on Great Britain £20,000; British orders issued on Canada, 55,000; Canadian orders issued on the United States $80,000; and United States orders issued on Canada $40,000. In all 15,595,000 money orders and postal notes were issued and handled by the Canadian Post Office Department in the year ended March 31, 1922.

To operate this huge organization great skill is required and the expenditure of much money. Approximately 10,000 persons are employed by the department, to whom an annual salary amounting to $14,407,000 is paid. In addition, the rural mail carriers must be paid, the railway for transporting the mail, as well as innumerable other small items which are necessary in the operation of this business. The annual cost of rural delivery service totals $2,750,000; salary expenditure $14,407,000; railway mail service $16,000,000, making a grand total of slightly over $30,000,000, or an expenditure of approximately .003 cents for each letter, package and newspaper carried by the Post Office Department of Canada.

To offset this huge expenditure the amount of stamps nearly equals the amount of expenditure, being estimated at $23,250,000. In addition, the department derived a considerable amount of revenue from the sale of postal notes and money orders, which enables it to operate without expense to the people of Canada, and in addition to pay a surplus on hand after all expenses have been paid. The department has been active in promoting a campaign for the more general saving of money by the public, and the Post Office Savings Bank, under the direct supervision of the Post Office Department, now has several thousand customers and deposits totalling over $25,000,000.

Montana Concern Connecting Up With Tank Farm at Coultts

Announcement made in Jasper, Wyo., that the Illinois Pipe Line Company will build a pipe line from the Sunburst Kevia oil field in Northern Montana, to Coultts, Alta., a distance of ten miles, to connect up with the Imperial Oil Company tank farm at Coultts, which means that the crude oil from the new border oil field in Montana will practically all be treated in Canada. Pimkie Is Home Again.

WHEN Pimkie once more reached his End-of-the-Earth home, he found his three Brownies and Stella, the Wishing Fairy, in quite a state of excitement. They were almost beginning to feel worried about him. Never before had he been away for such a terribly long time.

"Not that we were really afraid anything might have happened to you, Pim, dear," laughed Stella, "but we were becoming a wee bit nervous and were wondering if perhaps you might have decided that you preferred the ocean to your own home, and intended in the future to live there and stay with Pearl."

"As if I could leave anyone more than you four!" and the little Fellow jumped up to her and threw his arms around her. "As if I could possibly like any other place more than this one! Gee! It's great to be back!"

The other Brownies seemed as happy as he, and they crowded around listening to all the things he had to tell them about the undersea things he had seen. Snookums and Kinkapoo looked quite envious, but it held no allurements to Lorykine for poor little Lorykine had never upon the time he had been changed into a shrimp and had also had a swim undersea, and he had been so frightened by a goggle-eyed Hammerhead. It had cured him of any liking for such jumps, so there was no envy in his eyes as he listened to Pimkie.

"Stella," said Pimkie after he had told her about his trip. "I mean to ask Pearl something and forget; but perhaps you can tell me. Do absolutely all fish have eyes?"

"There is a certain one," she answered, "known as the Blindfish that has none. Shall I tell you about it?"

As they all nodded, she continued: "The Blindfish isn't an ocean creature, but lives in Kentucky or thereabouts in the United States in underground rivers and dark caves where it never sees the light of day. I suppose you know that there are rivers that course along the darkness of ages under the earth's surface?"

"The Blindfish is ghostlike little thing," the Fairy said, "for it is of such a death-like unattractive whiteness that it looks unreal."

"How big is it?" asked Kinkapoo.

"From three to six inches," replied Stella.

"However do they manage without being able to see?" Snookums asked curiously.

"I should think they would have an awful time bumping into things and not being able to see anything to eat!"

"Don't worry about that!" laughed Stella. "They are more than active and can outdo fishes that have eyes!" To help them and their way around their dark underground homes, they have several feelers on the head, that are so sensitive that these feel the slightest movement in the water, and they

in a perfect panic of fear and hide under stones at the bottom.

"You know," said Stella, thoughtfully, "there is always a reason for everything. The Blindfish is blind for the simple reason that it has no use for eyes, as it couldn't see in the pitch black waters. It is for the same reason that it is of such a deathly whiteness . . . all things living in the dark are pale."

"Oh, no," said Helen, laughing, as an effeminate looking young man came up, evidently in search of her. "I beg pardon, Miss Helen," he said, with a bow that seemed to include Wade, politely enough, in the apology. "But your mother asked me to find you. She wants you to meet some new guests who have just arrived."

"Oh, bother," said Helen carelessly. "She can look after them for me while I tell her I'll be with her by-and-by, and she turned back to Wade, paying no further attention to the 'polite' messenger, who departed, hiding his chagrin as best he could, though not very successfully."

After he had gone, she said, "No, I don't think Maxwell Frayne is likely to be an enemy; at least, not one that I fear. He is a gentleman though he is too insipid to interest me."

"And you think Moran is a man to fear," asked Wade, trying to speak gravely, but showing amusement in spite of himself.

"I don't believe you fear the devil," said Helen, with open admiration, "but Moran can be very dangerous and I feel sure he will try to injure you, if he ever finds a chance."

"Well, in that case, he will at least be interesting," said Wade, lightly. He would have been amazed if he had realized at the time how prophetic the girl's words were.

For the moment, however, he had little thought of peril and adventure to come. The time, the girl and the place, were all at hand, and he plunged headlong into a conspiracy that kept him for weeks in Chicago, strong, yet inclined to stay permanently, yet reluctant to settle in a city so little to his liking, when the great outdoors was calling to him so strongly.

While the petals of the passion flower were unfolding so rapidly in the conservatory, Race Moran had taken the Senator into a gentleman's room where they had had many secret conferences before. He had done the great man favors in the political machine, while the Senator was still a newcomer in the city, and with accurate judgment he had foreseen that Rexhill would be a winner.

Quick to see opportunities, he had cultivated the latter's acquaintance and courted his favor until he had become come the Senator's most trusted adherent, and was admitted to the closest intimacy, so that he had become a constant visitor to the Rexhill home, and had definitely determined in his own mind, to become one of the family. He knew well enough that Helen disliked him, but his ideas of women had been gained from association with a class that is easily dominated, and he was confident of his own powers, which, in fact, were very considerable.

The Senator was not blind to the other purpose, but though he was far from approving it, having other ideas concerning the daughter he idolized, he had not sought to discourage her, nor did he intend to. His motive was to let her go on until crisis should come, and in the meantime, Moran had not declared himself.

Helen's insistence at the door of the conservatory, however, had stung Moran, and as soon as he had the Senator in seclusion, he broke out:

"Who is that puppy Helen has on a string to-night?" he demanded roughly.

But the Senator could overlook rudeness when it suited his purpose to do so.

"I wouldn't call him a puppy exactly," he said, pleasantly enough; "he is a good deal younger than you are, I but he comes of pretty good stock in your town, Moran, and Stout tells me he has distinguished himself already in two or three ways. I reckon he'd be a pretty good friend to invest, if he ever takes an interest in politics."

"Oh, I know the Wade family all right," said Moran impatiently; "they belong to the silk stockings, but we have our own way of dealing with that kind in New York and I'm able to do the same thing anywhere else, if I have to. Maybe I'll have to if he comes between me and Helen. Senator, I want to marry that girl myself. I ain't asking your consent, exactly, for as far as her will is likely to do what we want to, anyhow, but I'd a heap rather have you favor the matter."

That was almost too much, but the Senator knew his man and also knew the value of his own position. He had no sense in breaking with him until it was unavoidable, so he still spoke pleasantly, though he had flushed with anger for a moment.

"Yes, I reckon you and Helen will do as you like about it, especially as Helen likes," he said. "I don't want to speak to you first, but there doesn't seem to be anything particular for me to say to you, so I'll let Helen really think."

"Oh, I'll find that out all right," said Moran, boastfully. "But this Wade person better look out; I might have him run into the river some night, if he pokes his nose into mine."

"I'd go easy on that, if I were you," said the Senator laughing heartily. "A head Wade might interfere with your plans worse than a live one."

"Oh, of course," replied Moran, refusing to laugh. "I'll look after him thoughtfully, after the other had left him. 'How long it will be before he does and how long it will be before I will have to keep him along some way or other to launch my own ship.'"

And he sat musing over his cigar till one by one his guests had gone, but he did not grow any less of a well-meaning empty, did Helen leave the conservatory.

For a few weeks hereafter Chicago seemed, to Gordon Wade's fancy, to be the very center of the universe. Gradually, however, the true nature of the man asserted itself, and realizing that for him there were many desirable places, he determined to look farther before choosing a permanent home. He told Helen frankly of his purpose, and to his great satisfaction she approved. There was no definite word of marriage between them, though they both looked forward to it and both, at the time of parting, deemed the understanding complete between them.

Helen would have had him turn to the East, for her heart was set on city life in one of the world's great capitals, but he declared he must see the West before deciding, and though she was disappointed, she was too wise to seek the domination she intended, at that stage of the game.

He departed, therefore, to find in Wyoming later on, his ideal home. His thought of Chicago thereafter, was that of the place where the girl he thought he loved was waiting for him, to claim her, so soon as his home was made suitable. There was much to do by way of preparation, however, and almost imperceptibly, however, he found himself becoming prominent among the bold and independent citizens who were rapidly pushing Wyoming on the map.

CHAPTER II. Jealousy

Meantime, many things of great interest to Gordon Wade happened without his knowledge.

A national election at which the previously dominant party was defeated, was a bad blow to Senator Rexhill, who not only suffered in prestige but to no small extent in his pocket. There was even in the minds of his friends, that he frequently used his political indiscretions in which he held an interest, and in which the greater part of his quickly-made fortune was invested. With the loss of his political pull, disaster came to one after another of those enterprises, and his successive losses were soon heavy enough to drive him almost to desperation.

His previous successes, however, had all been due to the audacity of his plans, for his boldness and courage were unquestionable. For a time he felt confident of winning again, and accordingly, maintained his lavish expenditure and luxurious style of living, with no word of caution to his wife and daughter, and he continued to seek for the long chances in business that offered the largest risks and the greatest gains.

All the redeeming qualities of his nature (and he had more than his enemies gave him credit for), were shown in his family life, and it was not surprising that Helen and her mother were both undisturbed by the gathering storm, but continued to live as he encouraged them to, having perfect confidence in his ability to overcome any and all the difficulties he might encounter.

Mrs. Rexhill continued to dream of social distinction. Failing to see that she had lost much of her own prestige by the Senator's political reverses, she continued to entertain so extravagantly in her palatial home, that she was still tolerated, and she took infinite satisfaction in the position she thought she occupied.

She considered Chicago the greatest city in the world, and she dreamed of Helen as its queen. To her mind, the true love was to accomplish that ambition was to persuade Helen to marry Maxwell Frayne. He had persistently courted the girl ever since he first met her, and he was heir to the great Frayne fortune.

The idea was not entirely revolting to Helen, though she had a small opinion of the elegant young trifler who pursued her so persistently, for she, too, had social aspirations, though he was more clear-sighted than her mother, she dreamed of wider circles than those of Chicago. Her husband, whoever he was to be, should take her to Paris, or at least to New York.

Her infatuation for Gordon Wade, however, was as strong as ever. Perhaps she was right in thinking of it as true love, she became anxious, annoyed by Wade's choice of a ranch man's life, and by his settling down out of the world, as she considered he had done. Her letters to him, tender as they were, told him plainly enough of her dissatisfaction, and thereby undoubtedly contributed to the slow growth of his indifference.

For a time she failed to perceive this, and enjoyed the excitement of the life till Wade should tire of the wilderness, as she fully expected him to do, and then return to her.

She drifted, until after a time her suspicions were aroused by the tone of his letters, and she became anxious. As time went on, Senator Rexhill's affairs became more and more involved. He realized that he was still in a chance of re-election, when his term of office should expire, and meantime, his fortune dwindled rapidly, though he was still careful not to betray that fact at home.

Moran knew the situation perfectly well, but he remained outwardly loyal to his employer, partly because of the latter's liberality, but more, perhaps, because of the hope he still had of winning Helen eventually, despite the dislike she took no pains to hide.

Knowing how bold the Senator was in his speculations, he came to him one day with an exciting story.

"There's a guy in town," he said, "who may be just a plain nut, but he has the name of being a scientific business man. He's been busy from his lard, and he's either got something mighty big, or he's got it on a whim."

Banff Motor Highway

Opening Ceremonies Will Be Held On June 30 at Vermilion Crossing

The official opening of the Banff-Windermere motor highway through the Canadian Rockies has been set for June 30, 1923. It is announced by the Commissioner of Canadian National Parks. On that date the last link in the great, 6,500-mile scenic tour through Western Canada and the United States will be thrown open to traffic, making the national parks of the two countries accessible to motorists from Mexico to Western Canada.

The opening ceremonies will take place at Vermilion Crossing, a point on the road midway between Banff, Alta., and Windermere, B.C.

The new highway is 93 miles long, of which the 50 miles lying in Rocky Mountain Park have been constructed previously by the parks branch, and another 43 miles by the British Columbia Government. The road gives a gradual whelway of 16 feet, surfaced with macadam, and the average cost of the 13 miles built by the parks branch was $7,700 per mile, though, in the heaviest construction, which included rock cuts from 40 to 60 feet high, the cost reached $37,000 per mile.

Fresh Rhubarb In Winter

Pie Plant Can Be Grown In Your Cellar

Fresh rhubarb of the tenderest quality may be grown at home according to an experimental project carried on at the Experimental Station, Kentville, N.S.

Clumps of rhubarb which had been two years planted from seedlings were forced under a bench in the greenhouse. These clumps were dug in the fall and allowed to thoroughly freeze before forcing. They were brought inside on January 16 and placed under the bench, January 18. The roots were sprinkled as occasion required, and some soil was scattered around them to help retain moisture.

To exclude light, canvas was placed around the bench. The first rhubarb was ready for use February 2, and it was finished March 20. The area occupied was 22 square feet. The yield was $9.75 pounds. The yield per square foot was 4.07 pounds. The conditions necessary for growth, it will be observed, were principally warmth and moisture. The light was excluded. Similar results can be obtained in the furnace room of a house cellar. It is worth trying, that is for one who enjoys "pie plant" in its finest condition.

Restaurant meals are now taxed in Germany, the duty amounting to as much as 100 per cent. for meals costing $2 and upward.

Make Further Move For Peace In Ireland During Holiday Season

Dublin.—Another move for peace in Ireland was made over the Christmas holidays. At a meeting of Sinn Féin clubs at the Mansion House a resolution was passed in favor of reconvening the last Anti Fews, or general convention of Sinn Féin clubs, with a view to taking steps to securing "a just and permanent peace." This conference has been summoned for January 7.

Ireland passed a very peaceful Christmas. For nearly three days the country has been immune from crime. The cabinet ministers for the first time in many weeks left the Government Buildings, going to spend the holidays with their families. The railway companies reported that some 26,000 persons crossed from England to pass the holiday period with relatives in Ireland.

Although these are regarded as signs of increased confidence in the Government, anxiety is not altogether absent. There were rumors that the irregulars contemplated a bold move in Dublin on Christmas Eve, but the army authorities guarded against possible danger by cancelling all leaves to the troops with the exception of those living in Dublin.

Eamon De Valera has issued a declaration which he signs "on behalf of the Government and the army."

He extends greetings to every citizen and soldier of the "Republic" declaring: "We consecrate ourselves anew to the achievement of independence for our country."

He appeals to the people to pray that God "shall bless our efforts and bring our hands and people the liberty, peace and happiness they need and desire."

Must Refund Money To British Bank

Ex-Kaiser Cannot Collect Interest On British Bonds

Brussels.—The decisions of the lower court that former Emperor William has no right to collect interest on British bonds has been sustained by the court of appeals in a decision handed down. The court ordered a Brussels exchange broker to refund to the British bank involved several million francs paid on coupons which the bank later learned belonged to the ex-Kaiser.

The ownership came to light when the British Government protested against the payment. The Dutch bank figuring in this case said to be one of several through which the former Emperor sent some coupons to be cashed so that no trace of their origin might be lost was exonerated as an innocent party.

Photograph Drunken Men

"Picture Cure" Will Be Tried Out in Des Moines

Des Moines, Iowa.—John B. Hammond, Chief of Police, has announced that every drunken man who is brought into police headquarters here after will have his picture taken. When the offender has become sober again he will be presented with a picture of himself, so that he may know just how he looked when he was brought to jail. Hammond hopes this "picture cure" will be a potent weapon against drunkenness.

HEART PALPITATED And Was Short Of Breath

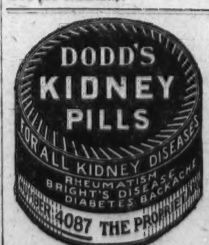

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, overwork or worry starts it to palpitate and throb ship beats, beat fast a time and then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS will give prompt and permanent relief. Mrs. Alice Bishop, 15 Hawthorne Ave., Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills to all persons troubled as I had been. I suffered from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath; my heart would skip beats, and in the night, at times, I would have to sit up to get my breath. I could not go up stairs without my heart fluttering and my nerves were all unstrung, but since using your famous Pills I have felt like a different person." Great Britain Takes Lone Stand In Respect To German Reparations

Cattle Buyers From Britain

Big Cattle Kings Coming Over to Purchase Canadian Grade Stock

St. John, N.B.—An interesting passenger on the Canadian Pacific steamship Minuteman, which arrived in St. John recently, was Hon. Duncan Marshall, Commissioner of Agriculture for Canada, who has been in England since last September in connection with the cattle embargo.

Speaking of the embargo on Canadian cattle, he said that prior to his departure for Canada he had the pleasure of seeing this important question settled. The question of the lifting of the embargo was watched with the keenest interest throughout England and its passage paved the way for a visit to this country of many of the big cattle kings, who announced their intention of coming here during the winter to purchase all grades of stock. All expressed great satisfaction at the removal of the embargo, as well as the glad tidings given them that it was proposed to remove the Canadian quarantine on British pure-bred cattle in this country.

Crew of Vessel Rescued

Saved From Almost Certain Death After Battle With Storm

New York.—The captain and crew of the two-masted schooner Gordon Fudge, of St. John, N.B., came into port on the British freighter Nenemee, after being rescued from almost certain death in a violent storm six days ago. The Nenemee picked up the schooner 1,000 miles off the United States coast. The little boat was bobbing around in the gale, her sails shredded and her rudder post shattered. Both her lifeboats had been crushed.

Captain E. O. Fudge, skipper and owner of the schooner, said he had been fighting the storm for 14 days. He had a load of salt which had become wet and his ship was waterlogged. The schooner was abandoned.

Bank Deposits Show Increase

Ottawa.—An increase of over $11,000,000 in the total amount of savings deposits in Canadian banks during the month of November and of nearly $13,000,000 in demand deposits is shown by the statement issued through the finance department. Demand deposits at the end of November totalled $544,446,720 as compared with $531,491,128 at the close of the previous month. Notice deposits totalled $1,167,699,000 as against $1,156,412,655 on October 31.

Earthquake in Australia

Melbourne.—The earthquake of Christmas afternoon was confined to the upper and middle portion of the south island. The shock was especially severe in North Canterbury, and recalled memories of the 'quake in Cheviot County in 1901.

Regina, Sask.—J. F. Frame, K.C., prominent in Saskatchewan legal circles, died suddenly at his home here of apoplexy.

He had served on a number of Government commissions and in 1919 declined a judgeship.

Royal Yacht Will Enter Races

London.—King George has definitely announced his intention of fitting out the famous yacht "Britannia" for racing next year.

Paris.—France gained an important victory in the Allied Reparations Commission when the commission, by a vote of three to one, declared Germany involuntarily in default in her wood deliveries for 1922.

France, Belgium and Italy stood in favor of the declaration, while Great Britain cast its ballot against it. The decision of the commission was immediately communicated to the Allied Government for their action. It may have a vital effect on the reparations problem if France can retain the support of Italy and Belgium when the reparations question is discussed at the January meeting of the premiers.

The lone vote cast against the declaration by Great Britain was in accordance with British policy, which has been opposed to declaring Germany in default, in the fear that such action might have a disastrous effect on the already precarious state of German finance. Italy's support of France in the balloting came as a surprise, and as an indication that Premier Mussolini is swinging over to the French side in the reparations controversy.

Germany has carried out more than 60 per cent of its schedule of wood deliveries for this year. When the German experts were before the commission several weeks ago, they announced that Germany had been unable to deliver more than she had and that the deliveries for 1922 must be greatly reduced.

Although the deliveries of wood in themselves are of less importance than the other matters connected with reparations, the French point out that the decision is of real value to France's position on reparations, since it reverses the order of things and places Great Britain in an isolated position on the issue.

Some of the French observers affected to see in the vote an indication that France, Italy and Belgium will represent a united front before Great Britain on the question of reparations at the coming meeting here of the premiers.

Say Germany Is Defaulting

Has Not Delivered Wood Demanded For This Year

Paris.—The Allied Reparations Commission for the first time in its history declared Germany to be in voluntary default in one of her reparations obligations. The default declared in delivery of wood, demanded of her for this year. The vote was three to one, France, Belgium and Italy voting for the declaration and Great Britain against it.

out appeal. The result is then that by an amendment to the School Ordinance, introduced at the suggestion of the Department of Education and which was passed by the Legislature in all probability without appreciation of its effect, the Department of Education has acquired absolute and arbitrary control over all private schools, educating pupils between certain ages, and by the mere refusal of one of their inspectors to certify that the school is giving efficient instruction to a child, the child's parents become subject to criminal proceedings resulting in fine or imprisonment. This arbitrary power, subject to no review, is capable of being applied at any moment to such non-Government institutions as Western Canada College, under Presbyterian auspices; Mount Royal College, under Methodist auspices; the Jesuit College, under Catholic auspices; and a number of other private institutions of learning. Legislation of this sort prevailed in the German Empire from the time immediately following its establishment in 1870 for a long period of years and under this legislation drastic measures were used to prohibit the use of any language but German in the schools. This whole movement became known as the Kultur Kampf. The body of people whom the defendant represents appear to have thought that in coming to this country where quite different ideas of the moral power of the State and of the liberty of the individual prevailed. They were unfortunately mistaken. They desire to have their religion pervade the secular instruction of their children. They desire that the happiness of their homeland may be maintained by their children being enabled to converse with their parents in their mother tongue, while at the same time being enabled to enter fully into the social and business life of the community by being enabled to converse in the English language. This is not to be allowed them. They must send their children to a Public School where in practice no religion is taught and where, even when it is taught it is merely as a subject of instruction. By this method of extinguishing these sentiments which furnish the basis of a happy family life they are expected to be converted into happy, contented and loyal Canadian citizens. They have exchanged one tyrannous provision from the School Law or unless the Department adopts a less tyrannical policy of administration of the law.

Champion Sows at University

With a view to establishing a herd of Yorkshire sows at the University of Alberta, four sows and a boar from three prominent herds in Ontario have been purchased. One of the sows was grand champion at the Toronto Exhibition this year, and the reserve grand champion at the Royal Winter Show. It comes from the Brethour herd at Burford. From the Featherstone herd two sows were purchased from the class winning prizes at Toronto the past summer. In addition to the Yorkshire, a Berkshire boar has been purchased, six months old, to head the herd at the University. This also is a prize winning animal. A Suffolk ram for the University's flock of sheep has been purchased from Jas. Bowman, of Guelph.

Instruction Class in Tractor and Car Repairing.

In view of the fact that so many of the local men have intimated their intention of learning the mechanism of and the art of making repairs to tractors and the various makes of cars, and, as Mr. Bonser, of the New Garage, has been spoken to by these regarding the starting of a class of instruction, Mr. Bonser requests that all interested in this matter call on him at their earliest convenience, as it is the intention to start such a class here, if the requisite number of students can be obtained.

A DOCTOR IN A TIN BOX!

Sounds strange, does it not? Yet that is how Mr. J. Cartier says Zam-Buk is regarded by his family. Mr. Cartier, who is a member of the family of the late Sir George Cartier, is Justice of the Peace and Assistant Clerk of the Circuit Court, Montreal. He first discovered the wonderful power of Zam-Buk by using it for eczema, which it completely ended. Since then his family is never without it.

"Allow me to express my gratitude," he writes, "for the benefit I have derived from the use of Zam-Buk. I have proved that it is, without doubt, the finest remedy for eczema. Its general healing and curative powers are immense. We call it 'Our Family Doctor,' and are never without it."

Others should see that Zam-Buk is always handy, for not only does it end pain, draw out inflammation and prevent blood-poisoning, but it heals skin diseases and injuries in the shortest time possible. All dealers, 50c. box.

Protecting Wild Life

Canada has led other countries in the matter of conserving wild life, the migratory bird treaty now in force between the United States and this country being largely the work of Canadians who saw in time the inevitable consequences of the inroads that were being made upon the game and bird population of North America. The treaty referred to was the biggest single piece of legislation aimed to protect wild life ever put upon the statute books of two great nations.—From the Ottawa Citizen.

For Catarrh.—It is one of the chief recommendations of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil that it can be used internally as well as externally. Sufferers from catarrh will find that the Oil when used according to directions will give prompt relief. Many sufferers from this ailment have found relief in the Oil and have sent testimonials.

Great Singer Attracted Birds

Jenny Lind Could Fill Carriage With Feathered Songsters

One of the prettiest stories heard about Jenny Lind came from a little old lady who went down to the dock to greet the old steamer, Atlantic, that brought the Swedish Nightingale to this country in the fall of 1920, amongst the booming of cannon and the cheers of 40,000 people who waited hours to see her. During part of the journeying of Lind in America, much of the distance had to be covered by stage. While going through the woods, Lind would have the coach stopped in order to listen and talk to the birds. So great was her power of attracting them with her own warbles that one day the inside of the coach was so filled with the feathered songsters that her manager was afraid for her safety.

Worms, however generated, are found in the digestive tracts, where they set up disturbance detrimental to the health of the child. There can be no comfort for the little ones until the harmful intruders have been expelled. An excellent preparation for this purpose can be had in Miller's Worm Powders. They will immediately destroy the worms and correct the conditions that were favorable to their existence.

RUPTURE KILLS 8,000 ANNUALLY

Eight thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Many of these unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the signs (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a corset, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At least, the truth is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—type cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—oxygen.

But science has found a way, and all true sufferers in the land are invited to make a test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for ruptures in the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot choke or strangle. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached. Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CANNOT come down. Send your name and ten cents (in coin or stamps) today to P. L. APAO CO., 483 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for test, facts and instructive information.—(C) P.L.
